

Mike Stapleton ARCS, MSc, MDes(RCA), CEng, MBCS, CITP: Managing Director (Operations)

Mike has been involved in all areas of System Simulation's technical work and has responsibility for developing the software engineering activity of the company. Has participated as software engineer, project manager and consultant in many projects relating to computer graphics, user-interface design, large text repositories, digital asset management applied in areas such as museum and library applications, manufacturing, publishing, business intelligence, computer-based training and document management.

Mike has been Project Director for projects with The British Museum, The V&A, Thames Valley Police, The Courtauld Institute, Culture24, The Wellcome Trust, British Telecom, Metal Box Company, British Aerospace, Mars Group.

A graduate of Imperial College, The London Institute of Computer Science and The Royal College of Art. Mike was previously a Reader at Bournemouth University where he founded the computer animation facility and established a course in computer graphics and animation as part of a BA in Communications and Media Production. He chaired a panel of the BSI committee responsible for developing international computer graphics standards and has represented the UK in this capacity at ISO meetings around the world. He has co-presented tutorials on PHIGS PLUS at EurographicsUK and SIGGRAPH and has been an examiner at BA and MSc levels.